

Standing Palm-Press Tu-Na

站势按掌吐纳法

1 / 3

FIGURES 3-4

Follow each panel left to right.

▲
inhale

▼
exhale

◆ voiced release

The source gives two breath patterns. Beginners are directed to practise Pattern A first.

Set up

breathe naturally

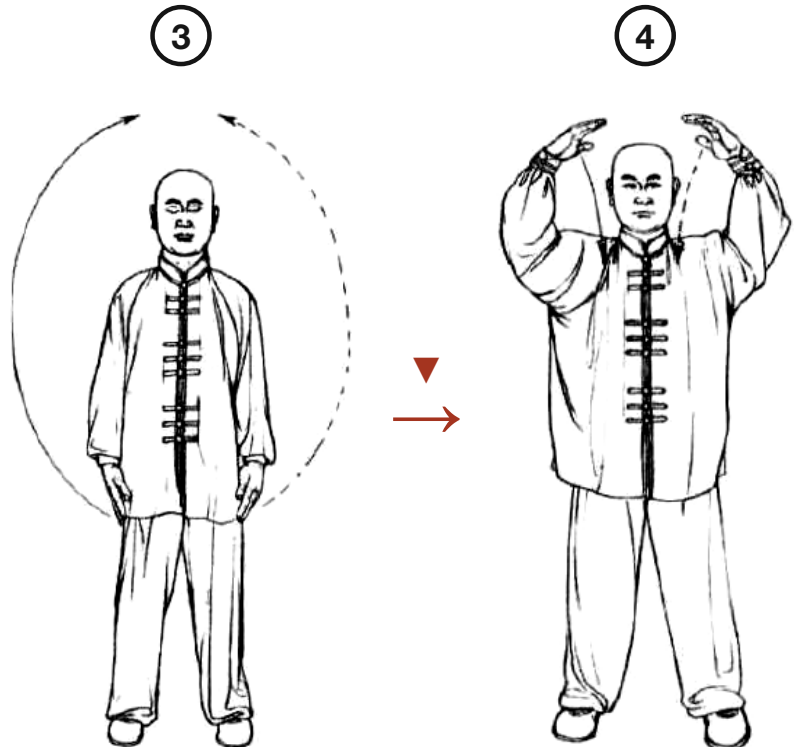

Stand with the feet about shoulder-width. Shift the upper body slightly forward, relax completely, let the hands hang at the sides, and lower the gaze.

Pattern A • Exhale

long • through the nose

Raise both hands from the sides to overhead. Keep the arms in a half-arc, palms down, and open the eyes.

Pattern A emphasizes taking in qi; Pattern B emphasizes expelling qi. Move slowly and continuously.

Pattern A • Inhale

deep • one continuous intake

Lower the palms slowly past the face, fingertips toward each other, then press down the chest to navel height. Finish with the fingers softly curved and the palms slightly cupped inward.

Pattern B • Inhale

deep • through the nose

Use the same raising movement: hands travel from the sides to overhead, arms rounded, palms down.

Pattern B • Exhale

long • one continuous release

Lower and press the hands past the face and chest to the lower abdomen, ending at navel height with softly curved fingers.

